Welcome! The first letter has arrived.

Inside is an introduction from your child's first pen pal. Here's how to make the most of it.

1 Read it together, or let them read it alone

Some children like a quiet first read; others love it read aloud. The "Real history" card on the back shows which parts are true.

2 Help them write back

- Any paper, any length. A drawing counts.
- Don't worry about spelling. Pen pals never correct it.
- Questions are perfect: the next letter answers them.
- Please leave out surnames, school, address and phone numbers.

3 Send us their letter

Take a photo of it (or type it in) on your account page. We read it, delete the photo straight away, and the next letter answers them, usually within a week or so.

How we keep it safe

- Every letter is fact-checked against real history before it's posted.
- Letters are written with AI and checked, and a person reviews any the checks flag.
- Children's replies go through safety checks. If something worries us, a trained person reads it.
- We never ask a child for personal details.
- You can read each letter before it's posted: turn on previews in your account.
- Photos of replies are deleted as soon as they're read.

We'd love to hear how it went

We're a small UK team, and you're one of our first families. Tell us what your child thought, what they asked, and what we could do better: just reply to any of our emails or write to hello@lettersfromhistory.co.uk.

Thank you for joining us at the very start. ~ The Letters from History team
